ANTONE PAVILION SCREENS

Wallis Ranch Public Art Collection, Eric Powell, 2016

While Wallis Ranch community neighborhood was being built artist Eric Powell designed a series of art pieces that would be installed throughout the development. The 4 pieces in the series are inspired by the properties history and landscape. At the entry way of the community is “Archeology” a 4 piece sculpture inspired by tools used on the ranches. The Entry Gates and a series of 3 benches that can be found on the walking trail and in back of Antone Pavilion are inspired by the shapes that the native grasses make on the surrounding hills. Lastly are the two sculptural screens inspired by the vintage industrial steel objects that were found on the property. The screens can be found mounted on the outside of Antone Pavilion.
